Did you know?

You can be buried on private land in many states.

Every state has different rules, but private property burial is possible -- especially in rural areas with disclosure and zoning compliance.

Did you know?

You can choose someone other than family to speak for you.

Legal next of kin isn't always your best voice.

Naming a Power of Attorney makes your choice official.

Thought Prompt:

What does a 'good death' mean to you?

There is no right answer -- but you're allowed to imagine one.
Quiet? Wild? At home?
Holding hands?

Write it down.

Did you know?

You can turn your ashes into a tree, a reef, or a vinyl record.

Legacy can be practical, poetic, and personal.

What feels like you?

Write it down.

Did you know?

You can handwrite your wishes -- and they still count.

If you never finish your legal forms, a letter can still guide your loved ones.

Keep it with your paperwork.

Did you know?

Many people never talk about death because they don't know how to start.

Your courage to name it -- even quietly -- can open the door for others.

SCRIPTed CUE

You don't have to have it all figured out. One card at a time. One conversation at a time. That's how this script gets written.

Your courage to name it -- even quietly -- can open the door for others.

Did you know?

You don't need a lawyer to write an Advance Directive

You just need to make it clear, sign it, and have it witnessed (or notarized - laws vary). You can always revise it later.
